Dramaturg’s Note

A great pair of heels can do wonders. It can boost confidence in one’s self, make a pair of legs look amazingly attractive and allure an affectionate gaze. But it can also mutilate the feet of whoever wears them and can attract unwanted attention. It’s a compromise many women choose for work each day or for a night on the town. The wearer might radiate confidence while simultaneously enduring excruciating pain. Set in modern day Boston, Spike Heels, by Theresa Rebeck, steps into the passionate life of quick-witted Georgie: a tough young woman who loves an eye-catching high heel. The play has an atmosphere of imbalance in which four adults struggle to establish their relationships with one another. Rebeck, creator of NBC’s Smash and the winner of the National Theatre Conference Award, was influenced by Pygmalion, the story of a man who falls in love with his creation. The Greek myth also inspired George Bernard Shaw to write his 1913 play Pygmalion that was later adapted into My Fair Lady. Informed by the myth and Shaw’s play, Rebeck created a comedic commentary that brings to light what problems may arise from the common trope of a man thinking it’s his duty to help a woman. Twenty-five years after it was first staged in 1990, the play still touches upon topics close to our society’s heart. Spike Heels explores ideas regarding self-identity, modern expectations of gender roles, and how much control we seem to have or lack in our relationships. Each character deals with the power struggles that arise when love and sex are involved. In less than forty-eight hours each character reevaluates what he or she means to one another and goes through the process of self-discovery. As the show suggests, a sexy pair of heels can boost a person’s sense of self worth but it can just as easily harm the wearer. In this way heels are parallel to relationships, both can significantly affect how we perceive ourselves and how we relate to others.

Emily Brehm
Director’s Note

Why does one wear heels? If you wear heels, when did you first wear heels and why? I feel I should disclose that I love wearing heels. I love the sense of power that I feel when I put them on; I feel as though I can take on any challenge (except for maybe a foot race). But the feeling of strength that I get from wearing heels comes at a cost, and I currently have the blisters to prove it.

I realize that, within our culture, high heels hold a contentious place and there are many (good) reasons why heels are viewed as problematic. What I find interesting about this play, however, is that Theresa Rebeck has presented them to us as a visual metaphor for relationships. There are relationships in which we compromise – we simultaneously feel on top of the world and endure pain. Like the first time one walks in a new pair of heels, we often feel unbalanced in our relationships when we feel vulnerable, exposed, insecure or overwhelmed in relation to another person. We may say or behave in ways that are unsettling to others and ourselves. We sometimes find ourselves in broken relationships, and like walking in a broken pair of heels, we struggle. I believe the characters in this play are on a journey in which they are seeking a sense of balance – within themselves and in their relationships with each other. The type of balance that characterizes strong, positive relationships takes work and begins within one’s self.

While not everyone has experience wearing heels, most have experience negotiating relationships, whether with significant others, friends, family, co-workers, etc. I hope that tonight’s show will encourage you to reflect upon the balance (or imbalance) in your own relationships.

Theresa Rebeck is a contemporary playwright whose works are produced both nationally and internationally. While her plays, including Dead Accounts, Bad Dates, and Mauritius are widely known among theatregoers, many audience members may recognize her as the creator of the NBC series, Smash. Originally from Cincinnati, Rebeck is a widely produced playwright throughout the United States and abroad. The play Omnium Gatherum, which she co-wrote with Alexandra Gersten-Vassilaros, was a 2003 finalist for the Pulitzer Prize. Rebeck has also published two novels and a collection of essays about writing and show business called Free Fire Zone. Additional writing and producing credits in television include Canterbury’s Law, Smith, Law and Order: Criminal Intent and NYPD Blue. She also produced the feature films Harriet the Spy and Gossip.

Rebeck holds an MFA in Playwrighting and a PhD in Victorian Melodrama, both from Brandeis University. She serves as a board member of the Dramatists Guild, a Contributing Editor to the Harvard Review, an Associate Artist of the Roundabout Theatre Company, a Playwright Adviser and Board Member of the LARK and has taught at Brandeis University and Columbia University. Rebeck is currently the Distinguished Visiting Professor of Playwriting at the University of Houston.

Cal Poly Theatre & Dance Department

About us…

The courses offered by the Theatre and Dance Department provide students with well-balanced programs of study, integrating practical production work with classes that examine the principles, theoretical aspects, and historical development of theatre and dance. A full range of studio dance courses are offered that include ballet, modern, jazz, and ballroom. Composition and dance production are available, as well as courses designed for future teachers of dance. The department also provides general education and breadth courses in the areas of dance history and dance appreciation. The department also acts as a cultural focus for the campus and community. An annual dance concert is presented under the auspices of the Orchesis Dance Company. Every spring a student-directed dance concert is also produced. Each quarter the department presents three main-stage theatre productions. Recent titles include: A Streetcar Named Desire, Smash, Falsettos, Betty's Summer Vacation, The Bald Soprano, Julius Caesar, The Phantom Tollbooth, Blood Wedding (Bodas de sangre), The Arabian Nights, Animal Farm, and As You Like It. The department also produces original works; sponsors guest lecturers and specialized workshops; and manages a program of student-directed works, field trips, and internships.

BA Theatre Arts
Students who major in Theatre at Cal Poly participate in a comprehensive, hands-on training program that gives them a balanced and enriched knowledge of theatre arts: acting, directing, design, playwriting, technical theatre, script analysis, and theatre history. Participation in main-stage productions, as actors and members of the artistic/production crew, is a key component of each student's education. As a small program, the Theatre Arts B.A. allows for faculty to get to know students' abilities and needs as individuals; promoting the selection of special projects, electives, and interests that mesh with their career ambitions. The Department's curriculum also offers courses as part of the University's General Education Program: Introduction to Theatre, Theatre History I & II, Theatre in the United States, Global Theatre and Performance, and Topics in Diversity on the American Stage.

Dance Minor
The Dance Minor consists of 26 units designed to provide the student with a well-balanced program in the art and education of dance. Admission to the minor is contingent upon a departmental interview and review. Students must have more than a 2.0 GPA.

Theatre Minor
The Theatre Minor is designed to provide a foundation of 12 required units in three major aspects of theatre: introduction/appreciation, design/production, and diversity. On top of that, the inclusion of 16 additional elective units allows for a degree of specialization in an area of the student's choice. Students should discuss their interests with department faculty. Admission to the minor is contingent upon a departmental interview and review. Students must have more than a 2.0 GPA.
Private support for the Department is crucial to recruiting and retaining top students and faculty in our competitive and increasingly global world. In order to continue providing the outstanding educational experiences Cal Poly is known for, we need your support.

REALLY SUPER COOL

Pick up New Times every Thursday for the latest in news, arts, entertainment, opinion, and more. Also, because it’s cool. It’s cool to read, it’s cool to share, and it’s cool to recycle when you’re all done. Just be sure to check us out cover to cover before you help the Earth.
Comprehensive Training
Our program gives students a very balanced and enriched knowledge of all aspects of theatre arts: design, directing, playwriting, acting, dramatic history and literature, and stagecraft.

Student Opportunities
The small program size allows for faculty to get to know students’ abilities and needs. As a result, students are encouraged to select projects, electives, and interests that mesh with their individual career ambitions.

Liberal Arts Foundation
The BA Theatre Arts Major is committed to exploration of other disciplines, encouraging students to pursue a minor or double major where possible as part of their undergraduate studies.

Hands-On “Learn By Doing” Experience
In addition to three faculty-directed mainstage shows each year, the program’s production calendar also includes an annual student-directed one-act festival, club sponsored performances, as well as independently approved projects.
