Madhavi McCall, Associate Dean, College of Arts and Letters, San Diego State University

Dr. Madhavi McCall currently serves as the Associate Dean in the College of Arts and Letters at San Diego State University. She joined the SDSU Political Science department in 2001. She earned her PhD in Political Science from Washington University in St. Louis, her Masters from The University of Akron and her B.A from Case Western Reserve University. Dr. McCall teaches classes in public law, concentrating on examining the relationship between politics and society to the development of legal principles. Before joining the Dean’s office in 2015, Dr. McCall served as Chair of the Political Science department from 2010-2014.

Dr. McCall’s research interests center on the voting behavior of state supreme court justices and the determinates of judicial behavior. Her state court research examines the differences in voting behavior of appointed and elected state supreme court justices as well as the differences in the voting patterns of male and female justices. Dr. McCall’s research on the United States Supreme Court tends to revolve around an examination of recent decisions and the impact these decisions may have on public policy. In addition to her co-authored book (Law and Criminal Justice: Emerging Issues in the Twenty-first Century), her articles have been published in American Review of Politics, Social Science Journal, Politics and Policy, Judicature, American Politics Research, Justice System Journal, American Journal of Criminal Justice, numerous law reviews and as book chapters.
