INVITES YOUR INTEREST IN THE POSITION OF

— MANAGER — OUR LOCATION

Located in the Southern San Joaquin Valley, Lindsay-Strathmore Irrigation District (LSID or District) is in the heart of California’s citrus growing region, nestled against the foothills of the Sierra Nevada mountains. The small rural communities of Lindsay and Strathmore border the District. Larger communities of Porterville, Tulare, and Visalia are within a few minutes drive and Bakersfield and Fresno are less than an hour south and north, respectively.

LINDSAY-STRATHMORE IRRIGATION DISTRICT

The District was established under the 1887 Wright Irrigation Act on October 25, 1915. Formation was needed to raise capital to bring a secure source of water to the District. The original dry land acreage was converted to citrus through the years as surface water supplies became more available to growers, such as through the Central Valley Project.

We maintain over 100 miles of underground, pressurized steel and plastic pipelines serving 400 family farms and nearly 1000 homes. We employ 17 full-time employees with the responsibility of serving irrigation and household water 24 hours a day, 365 days per year.

We provide ourselves on providing a stable, reliable water service to the nearly 12,500 acres of citrus and other permanent crops within District boundaries.
