Retirements

Johannah Varland has retired as staff emeritus after 13 years in the Office of Research and Economic Development. She worked 12 years as a grants analyst for Cal Poly Corporation Sponsored Programs supporting the College of Engineering and her last year as the contracts analyst for the Grants Development Offices. Varland worked closely with the Aerospace Engineering Department on all 11 of the revolutionary Cal Poly CubeSat satellite launches to date. Varland's legacy to Cal Poly is her success forging innovative ways to administer the complex contracts and unique requirements of this pioneering chapter in space technology. Working within this international community underscored the need for export control protocols and Varland took the initiative to work collaboratively to make this highly regulated arena manageable. Prior to retirement, Varland qualified for catastrophic leave for ovarian cancer, now in remission, receiving weeks of leave donations from her treasured co-workers. Her years at Cal Poly cap a career of public service in nonprofit, city, county, state and federal agencies. In retirement she will continue serving as head gardener for the Estero Community Garden in Morro Bay, which she co-founded in 2004.
