Cal Poly Police Ask: 'If You See Something, Say Something'

The Cal Poly Police Department urges the campus community: "If You See Something, Say Something." The effort is part of a national campaign with the Department of Homeland Security to raise awareness of the indicators and importance of reporting suspicious activity to law enforcement. Suspicious activity could include: a vehicle parked in an odd location, unattended packages or backpacks, eliciting information at a level beyond curiosity, and observations of someone paying unusual attention to facilities or buildings beyond a casual or professional interest. If you see suspicious activity, report it to Cal Poly Police by calling or texting 9-1-1. You'll be asked to describe specifically what you observed, including who or what you saw, when you saw it, where it occurred and why it appeared suspicious.

North Coast Vanpool Groups Seeking Few Additional Riders

Need a simple, relaxing ride to and from campus? Los Osos, Morro Bay and Cayucos residents are invited to cut down their daily commutes by joining a vanpool group. Currently vanpool groups from the North Coast are looking for a few more people to get these routes rolling. Open to all students, faculty and staff members, a vanpool is like a carpool, except it holds more people — usually those who live near one another. Riders have access to a number of local vendors that provide vanpool services in San Luis Obispo County, including Enterprise Vanpool and Ride-On Transportation. The vendors provide competitive pricing that includes a complete service package, vehicle registration, insurance and maintenance. The vanpool also receives fuel and parking on campus from Transportation and Parking Services. This unique rideshare opportunity can ease the stress of the daily commute, offer extra time to prepare for school or work, or allow riders to relax after a long day. Vanpools also help reduce traffic, air pollution and Cal Poly's carbon emissions caused by transportation. Anyone interested in reserving a vanpool seat, or those who want more information, are encouraged to email commute@calpoly.edu.
