Fireside Chat with Cornel West Set for Jan. 16

A fireside chat with renowned educator, philosopher, author and activist Cornel West will be held from 6 to 7 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 16, in the Performing Arts Center Pavilion. Hosted by the Cross Cultural Centers and the Office of University Diversity and Inclusion (OUDI), the event is geared toward students but open to the campus community. Later that evening, West will give the keynote talk at the university's second annual Martin Luther King Jr. Dinner, which honors King's legacy by inspiring transformational change and raising awareness about the lives and experiences of people of color at Cal Poly. During the fireside chat, West will engage in a moderated question-and-answer session with attendees. The chat is free and open to all campus community members; seating is limited and first come, first served. Doors open at 5:30 p.m. The event will be livestreamed at <https://www.calpoly.edu/fireside-chat-with-cornel-west/>. West is best known for his works "Race Matters" and "Democracy Matters," his memoir "Brother West: Living and Loving Out Loud," and his most recent book, "Black Prophetic Fire."

Transportation and Parking Services Seeking Input in Survey Begins Jan. 22

Cal Poly has engaged Walker Consultants to help the campus develop a long-term parking plan and to improve alternative transportation options. Toward this end, a survey has been prepared in collaboration with Transportation and Parking Services (TAPS), Cal Poly Sustainability, and faculty members from the Civil and Environmental Engineering Department. As part of this process, TAPS will learn more about the parking and travel patterns of current students, faculty and staff and gauge attitudes toward parking and transportation-related issues. To determine these characteristics, input is needed from the campus community. The transportation and parking survey will be sent via campus email on Tuesday, Jan. 22, and will be active through Jan. 31.
