Architecture Professor Tom Fowler Receives Prestigious CSU Teaching Award

In recognition of extraordinary commitment and dedication, architecture Professor Thomas Fowler has been selected a 2019 recipient of the prestigious Wang Family Excellence Award by the CSU. The annual award, established in 1998, recognizes four outstanding CSU faculty members and one staff member who have distinguished themselves by exemplary contributions and achievements. For more than 23 years, Fowler has helped shape Cal Poly's top-ranked public architecture program. He is nationally recognized as an influential innovator in the field of architectural education and has inspired generations of students who have gone on to achieve success in both their personal and professional lives. Employee Parking Now Available in New K-2 Lot Behind North Mountain Residence Halls

Staff and faculty can now take advantage of a newly designated parking location near the core of campus. The newly designated K2 parking lot consists of the northern section of the R1 lot off Klamath and Truckee roads. The redesigned R1 parking lot consists of the southern two terraces of parking spaces located directly across Klamath Road from Trinity Hall, south of Mountain Lane. The K2 parking lot is designated as a staff/faculty lot from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday to Friday. The 192 parking spaces now available in the K2 lot were redesignated from the Grand Avenue structure over winter break to alleviate morning and evening traffic congestion. The unmarked spaces in the Grand Avenue structure will continue to be available to employee permit holders. The new K2 lot can be accessed via Village Drive and Mountain Lane from North Perimeter Road. For more details on parking, visit parking.calpoly.edu.

Cornel West Speaks to Campus Community in Visit to Cal Poly; Camille O'Bryant Honored with MLK Legacy Award

Renowned professor, philosopher, author and activist Cornel West captivated hundreds of campus community members at two separate events Jan. 16, including a student-focused "fireside chat" and the second annual Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. dinner. Cal Poly's inaugural MLK Legacy Award was also bestowed during the dinner to College of Science and Mathematics Associate Dean and kinesiology Professor Camille O'Bryant, recognized as a strong advocate of inclusion and equity efforts for underrepresented students. The award salutes a campus community member who upholds the legacy of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. by leading with love and hope to create a legacy of diversity, equity and inclusion. "Camille is a tireless advocate for our students and a staunch supporter of their success, both academic and personal," said Dean Wendt, dean of the College of Science and Mathematics. "I'm incredibly proud that Camille is a member of our college. She daily helps us become a better community." O'Bryant joined the faculty at Cal Poly in 1999, and her efforts to promote diversity and inclusion on campus have been a focus of her teaching, scholarship and service to the campus and local community.

In Memoriam

After fighting cancer for a year and a half, Ladd Caine passed away at home with his family. Caine served for 15 years as equipment technician in the Industrial and Manufacturing Engineering Department but was wellknown for helping students and faculty across the college and campus. He brought 20 years of machinist experience to campus and was never shy about sharing his expertise in helping to get something made. He also occasionally shared stories from a lifetime of colorful experiences. Caine formally retired just this year and was able to spend more time in recent months with his wife, Jill, and daughter Jessica (Mechanical Engineering, '14). Caine will be missed particularly by those who've spent time in the manufacturing labs of Building 41.
