Cal Poly Ongoing Testing Site Offers Employees More Testing Dates in November

To accommodate a campus polling location at the Performing Arts Center, the Cal Poly Ongoing Testing Program will be temporarily unavailable. Visit the campus coronavirus website for more testing days available to the campus community, starting Nov. 7. Employees are invited to test Monday through Friday, Nov. 16-20, from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. The university is providing the free COVID-19 tests to campus community members as a preventative measure to more quickly identify and isolate asymptomatic individuals. Ongoing testing is required for on-campus student residents and students coming to campus for in-person classes, to work or access other services. The ongoing testing program is also available to Cal Poly state, ASI and Cal Poly Corporation employees. Faculty teaching face-to-face courses and faculty and staff physically working on campus are strongly encouraged to participate. Employees working virtually are also welcome to participate. For more information, to register and sign up for an appointment, visit <https://coronavirus.calpoly.edu/ongoing-testing>.

Help Campus Dining Build a Better Dining Experience and Win Prizes

Campus Dining is looking to create a better dining experience and would like feedback from the campus community. Creating an eclectic, on-trend dining experience is a job that takes near constant tweaking and research and this annual fall survey is a big part of that process. Completion of the survey, which takes roughly eight minutes, enters each respondent into a sweepstakes to win one of three prizes: a set of AirPods Pro with a Cal Poly case, a Spikeball set with the SpikeBuoy accessory and a Lume Cube Lighting Kit. Each fall Campus Dining seeks feedback from students, faculty and staff as they work to improve the customer experience, and to develop more innovative ways to deliver its products and serve the campus. The survey is open from Oct. 26-Nov. 6, and can be accessed at <https://www.calpolydining.com/survey/>.

Librarian Supports Diverse Student Entrepreneurs through New Resource Guides

For years, librarian Mark Bieraugel has connected students with the information they need to conduct research, launch a startup or take the next step in a job search. But recently, Bieraugel, who uses they/them pronouns, felt compelled to take that work one step further by creating a trio of noncurricular resource guides for entrepreneurs who identify as LGBTQIA, women, and Black, Indigenous and people of color. They curated the guides with information about financing, equity-focused accelerator programs, and thought leadership across different industries as a way to inspire budding business leaders. “Just within the last couple years or so, I came out in a big way as a nonbinary human being,” Bieraugel said. “I think part of this is to support the people that I’m interested in. They can look at this [guide] and understand that somebody cares about them to put this together.” Read more at <https://www.calpoly.edu/news>.

Vote By Mail Ballot Dropoff Available at Kennedy Library

The book drop box in front of Kennedy Library is now being used as a ballot drop box location for the Nov. 3 general election. This box is a safe and secure space for voters to drop off their completed ballots. Signage is in place informing library patrons to return their materials to a separate book drop box across the street from the library. The ballot drop box at Kennedy Library is one of three in the city of San Luis Obispo and one of 19 in the county.

Mustang Band Adapts to COVID-19

Cal Poly kicked off the new academic year with commonsense adaptations to the coronavirus pandemic: a hybrid learning plan, postponed athletics competitions and virtual events, among many other changes. But a quieter campus doesn't mean school spirit is gone. Even without the usual fall fanfare, the university's largest and loudest league of supporters, Mustang Band, plays on — thanks to some creative modifications. "Our leadership team has put in hundreds of hours of work to develop a plan that allows Mustang Band to meet in-person safely and continue to grow musically," says Nick Waldron, Mustang Band director. The band, which has more than 210 members, learned it would be able to meet in person only a few weeks before classes began. In order to practice together, they split into six sub-groups: four with equal instrumentation of brass and woodwinds, one featuring drumline and one with colorguard performers. These mini-bands, which practice both musical pieces and marching in formation, rotate between outdoor rehearsal spaces multiple times a week. Read more at <https://www.calpoly.edu/news>.

In Memoriam

Cal Poly Professor Emeritus William "Bill" Howard, 88, died Aug. 29, surrounded by family and friends at his home in San Luis Obispo. Howard earned a Bachelor of Arts degree in history and philosophy and a master's degree in geography from the University of Denver, and a doctorate in geography and urban planning from the University of Edinburgh, Scotland. After teaching at the University of Denver, the University of Colorado Denver, and the Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University, he was hired to head Cal Poly's City and Regional Planning Department in 1980, a position he retained until 1989. He retired as professor emeritus in 1994. Howard was responsible for the department's first professional accreditation in 1984, and during his tenure the total students enrolled in both undergraduate and graduate programs increased from 84 to 251. Howard was a cherished professor and department head whose passion for city planning and endless energy continuously enriched students' education and preparedness for the real world through projects assisting communities in their planning efforts. In honor of Howard's legacy, a scholarship in his name has been established to support students in Cal Poly's Master of City and Regional Planning program.
