For the 25th consecutive year, Cal Poly has been named the best public, master's-level university in the West by U.S. News and World Report's annual America's Best Colleges guidebook. The College of Engineering ranked No. 7 on the nationwide list of best engineering master's-bachelor's programs.

Retirements

Doug Epperson, dean of the College of Liberal Arts, will retire in August 2018. He has been the dean since 2012. Epperson has been a strong proponent for interdisciplinary collaboration at Cal Poly. He helped to introduce four new minors that combine the studies of science, technology and society. He also formed a standing inclusivity and diversity committee for both students and faculty, and he hired an associate dean for diversity and curriculum. The university will begin the recruitment process for the college's next dean this fall, with the aim of appointing the next dean before summer.

Kimi Ikeda, chief operating officer for Information Technology Services (ITS) will retire Sept. 29, after 35 years of service. Ikeda's career began as a work-study student employee in Athletics followed by various administrative roles in Administration and Finance (AFD). Ikeda moved to Academic Affairs in 1996. She has led many team efforts including the conversion and implementation of a new student administration system, and an earlier graduation initiative. For more than 30 years, Ikeda worked behind the scenes, making a positive difference that has been felt by many. ITS will hold an ice cream social in Ikeda's honor at the Cal Poly Plant Shop from 2 to 4 p.m. Sept. 29.
