I hope you'll join me Friday afternoon for a truly special moment for our Cal Poly community.

Astronaut Victor Glover — one of our own — is returning to Earth after traveling further from our planet than any human has been, covering more than 250,000 miles as part of NASA's Artemis mission. Watching him complete this incredible journey is not only historic, it's deeply personal for Cal Poly.

We'll gather in the UU Lounge to watch the live splashdown off the California coast and celebrate what this moment represents: the power of Learn by Doing and the extraordinary paths our graduates take.

There's something meaningful about experiencing this together — students, faculty and staff — as a community that helped shape Victor's journey.

Please plan to stop by, connect with colleagues and share in this proud moment for Cal Poly.

Jeffrey D. Armstrong
President
