

CROSS CULTURAL FACULTY SYMPOSIUM

Social Justice Teaching as a Process:

Educators Working to Sustain and Enhance their Practice in Urban Schools

Dr. Oscar Navarro

Wednesday, October 26th
4:00 - 6:00pm
Chumash Right Wing (UU 207)

Oscar Navarro is an Assistant Professor in the School of Education at Cal Poly State University, San Luis Obispo. His teaching and research interests include social justice teaching and the schooling of students of color in secondary schools. These interests are informed by his experience as a high school teacher and teacher activist in South Central Los Angeles. Current research examines the ways that social justice educators are sustaining and enhancing their practice in urban schools through a critical inquiry group.

For more information, contact culture@calpoly.edu

The CCC's new series, the Cross Cultural Faculty Symposium, highlights work furthering the visibility of intersectional perspectives touching race, class, ability, sexuality, immigration status, and gender identity in the academy, and showcases the work of diverse faculty on our campus.

UNLIMITED POSSIBILITIES